

I find the way you narrated your desire to explore and your curiosity about the school computers in your earlier paragraphs very successful. I suggest you to consider explaining some technical words like "scripts" and maybe give some examples about the particular properties of Windows 7 you are missing in detail so that the readers without a technical background could grasp the concept you clearly. A few explanatory words in between those sentences would be sufficient. i.e: A script which does an automated task on specified machines etc.
